

January–February 2026: Spring Momentum Takes the Stage

We are delighted to be back from break and have officially kicked off the Spring 2026 semester at Missouri Southern State University and the energy in the theatre spaces has been electric.

January opened with auditions for our upcoming production of Godspell, bringing together returning students and new faces eager to jump into the work. Rehearsals began shortly after the term started on January 12, and the rehearsal rooms have been buzzing ever since. Alongside Godspell, our team also launched rehearsals for Talley's Folly, setting the tone for a semester rich with collaboration, craft, and storytelling.

Beyond the rehearsal hall, faculty and students are gearing up for a robust slate of outreach and educational programming this spring. We're excited to participate in MSSU Performing Arts Shadow Day on February 16, host our Spring Theatre Workshop on March 11, and travel to Classen High School in Oklahoma City for two additional workshops—continuing our commitment to sharing theatre skills and inspiration with the wider community.

As we move through February and beyond, we're grateful to be back in the rhythm of classes, rehearsals, and creative exchange. It's shaping up to be a dynamic and meaningful spring, and we can't wait to share what's next from the stage.
